

Proctors Theatre

SCHENECTADY, NY

Proctors Theatre, a former vaudeville house designed by architect Thomas Lamb, located in Schenectady, has kept EverGreene working to restore the historic theatre for nearly 20 years.

For the most recent and final phase of restoration, EverGreene conserved ornamental plaster and decorative paint in the mainstage auditorium and lobby. The balcony fascia was refinished to match the existing ornament, craftsmen restored regions of historic scagliola and sections of plaster and gilding will be restored to match the original. Past restoration campaigns included gilding the auditorium capitals; replicating missing sections of rail molding; repairing badly fractured scagliola in the auditorium mezzanine and refinishing wooden handrails at the mezzanine crossover.

The theatre, boasting one of the largest movie screens in the Northeast, also hosts shows on the national Broadway circuit.

MORE INFORMATION:

<https://evergreene.com/projects/proctors-theatre/>

SERVICES PERFORMED

Decorative Painting & Finishes
Gilding
Plasterwork
Scagliola

PROJECT DETAILS

Original Architect
Thomas Lamb

253 36th Street, Suite 5-C | Brooklyn, New York, 11232 | (212) 244 2800 | evergreene.com