

Publications Committee Awards

Every year, the APT Publications Committee presents three awards to authors of the best APT Bulletin articles published since the last conference. Nineteen articles were published in the Bulletin over the past year. The Publications Committee thanks all the authors and peer reviewers who shared their knowledge with the APT community and volunteered their time and expertise, as well as Diana Waite and Liz Marsh from Mount Ida Press, the APT Bulletin editor, for their diligence to ensure the high quality of the articles published in the Bulletin.

The Publications Committee thanks this year's jury members:

- David Artigas, engineer and Senior Project Manager with Simpson Gumpertz & Heger in New York, NY, USA;
- Mary Jablonski, conservator and Principal with Jablonski Building Conservation, Inc. in New York, NY, USA;
- Jan Kubanek, architect and Architectural Conservation Lead with ERA Architects Inc. in Montréal, Québec, Canada;
- Brad Taylor, structural engineer and Director of Engineering at JCK Engineering in Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada.

This year's winners of the Anne de Fort-Menares Award for the most outstanding article demonstrating excellence in the application of historical research to preservation practice are Caroline Alderson and Jeff Greene, for their article "Rediscovering Clara Barton's Missing Soldiers Office in Washington, D.C."

This year's winners of the Oliver Torrey Fuller Award for the most outstanding article demonstrating technical excellence and innovation published in APT Bulletin are Tim Michiels and Dan Bergsagel, for the article "Retain, Reinforce, or Reclaim: Best Practices for Renovating Structural Wood Floors."

This year's winners of the Martin Weaver Award for the most outstanding article demonstrating excellence in the category of history of technology, training and education in historic preservation, and wood research, published in the APT Bulletin are Erin Gibbs and Katherine Wonson for their article "Purified Linseed Oil: Considerations for Use on Historic Wood."

Please let the Publications Committee know about presentations you heard at the Detroit conference that would be good candidates for publishing as articles in the Bulletin. If you have ideas for special issues, please let us know that as well. We are especially interested in articles on emerging issues and gaps in current knowledge.

— Cristina Radu, Publications Committee Awards Jury Captain

